HAILED AS MODERN "MONA LISA"

J. B. LUELLEN TAKES LIFE IN CELLAR OF HOME

Cuts Wrists and Plunges Butcher Knife into Chest Early Today

FOUND DYING BY WIFE

Mental Derangement, Caused by Blood Poisoning, Assigned as Cause of Act

John B. Luellen, 35, of 400 N. Prospect, a prominent Marion butcher and a resident of this city for about 25 years, is dead today as a suicide.

Luellen died in City Hospital at 8:40 o'clock this morning after he had stabbed himself with a butcher knife in the cellar of his home.

Mental derangement, said to have resulted from a recent attack of blood poisoning, was assigned by relatives as the cause of his death.

Ten months ago Luellen sustained a cut on the right hand while working in his butcher shop on N. Main st. The wound set in and he was unable to work for several weeks.

The effects of the poisoning were said to have broken his nervous system completely. He had been unable to get out of bed only a short time.

Luellen got up at 6:30 o'clock this morning to go with his grandson John Luellen on his milk route. John Luellen, a high school boy, was with him when he was found.

Luellen was found in the cellar of his home. He had cut his wrists and plunged a butcher knife into his chest. He was found by his wife.

Luellen was born in Marion County, March 2, 1891, and was the son of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Luellen. He was married in 1914 to Mrs. Luellen.

THE all Asia conference is off.

Asian nations against the western necessary punish white races for their

Japanese statesmen wise gentlemen

PROFESSORS of colleges who sided yesterday with the international peace might learn as much about international peace if they showed home and studied human nature. The statement, Man is by nature a beast, is not easily to all but does apply to a magnificent majority.

All hence fight. And in a fight until a very powerful majority is a as to stop fighting. We need a plan more than we need peace and internationalism.

THE Swiss prepare for trouble and don't have trouble. Such men as Recent officers of the Swiss army led young recruits up hills. A march a peak 10,000 feet high as part of their training and the ascent was made at night.

The great war raged all over and Switzerland was not there. There was no intrusion on Swiss soil. It would have been too expensive. Uncle Sam might learn something from his Swiss brethren.

Daily Proverb—"True happiness is to no place contented, but still to be found in a contented mind."

Peggy Joyce still declares that she will never marry again.

The difference in effect may be this: the other time Joyce Hawley utilized the poison for both purposes.

It develops that there was a lot of electrical energy in the primary campaign of Mr. Smith over in Illinois.

"At times I am inclined to wonder," observed the restaurant philosopher at luncheon today, "if it wouldn't make a bit with the motoring world to improve the detours first."

A stray item says Atlantic City is going to continue the regulation of bathing suits. So much of them had been regulated off the last time we were down there that it's a bit surprising to learn that there is anything left by this time to regulate.

From the tone of the utterances of the Chicago papers one might infer that they haven't very much use for championship boats, anyway.

Wouldn't it have been the refinement of crudity had that Chicago editorial writer accepted Rudolph Valentino's challenge and, as the challenged party, named powder puffs as the weapons?

A recent survey goes to show that the Great West is very much like the rest of the country; that it talks dry, but drinks wet.

Still, the case of Chicago is not utterly hopeless. At the present rate, murderers, bandits, drug-peddlers, burglars and other thugs may ultimately wipe out each other.

"There's never any telling," remarked the fellow who lives next door on the way down town this morning, "John Howard Payne might have written 'Home Sweet Home' into his opera just the same, even if there had been a Volstead law in effect over here at the time."

Still, we can hardly blame Vice President Latta for talking between sessions of congress. He gets mighty little chance for self-expression while congress is in session.

We try to console ourselves with the thought that maybe the reason why the passing of us true aristocrats of the land doesn't attract more attention is not so much due to lack of appreciation on the part of our fellow-citizens, but rather owing to the fact that we are wiped out in bunches like the week-enders.

Columbus Municipal Traffic Judge Miller gave twenty-four speeders fifteen-day jail terms each, Tuesday, and fined fifty others. That man must be taking traffic regulations seriously.

If liquor is being sold aboard the Leviathan, as charged, conditions certainly have undergone a change. Three years ago, it was the practice of passengers to take enough aboard with them to carry them across the Atlantic, and we have heard of a case or two where Great Britain profited by attempts to smuggle some on the other side.

Judging by reports from our Atlantic seacoast, somebody must have slipped a little liquor out of England while General Andrews, who is over there to stop the flow at its source, wasn't looking.

There was a time when candidates feared the opposition of the Anti-Saloon league, but just at present it seems to be the possibility of its support which scares 'em almost into fits.

The Flight of Warren.

Press reports have made newspaper readers familiar with the financial situation which is now being faced by the city of Warren.

A situation by reason of which the city council has seen fit to order one of her two fire stations closed and the laying-off of her entire police force. The city has a deficit of $70,000, and two months' pay are due members of her fire and police departments.

It was planned to have the sheriff's office afford police protection, but to this the city of Niles has voiced vehement objection, holding that it would be unfair should the entire county have to pay for protection of one of its municipalities save in the case of an emergency, such as a riot—a situation, it may be recalled, which arose not so long ago in Niles.

As usual, the citizenship of Warren is planning to raise funds to maintain the police and fire departments after Saturday night, at which time the council's order goes into effect. In other words, public spirited citizens are planning to make amends for the low ambitions plans of the city government.

The situation of Warren as pictured in the press is decidedly reminiscent of that of Marion from which we so recently emerged. We hope that, having had her experience she will profit from it by curbing her longing for any and all unnecessary expenditures—a lesson we here in Marion do not appear to have learned.

They Come with Unclean Hands.

Senator Borah has many traits which we do not admire, he has ways which do not appeal to us, he has strayed into paths into which we have not followed him, he has uttered many statements which seemed to us to be ill-advised, but we are with him as far as his representation of facts is concerned in what may be called his controversy with Chancellor of the Exchequer Churchill, of Great Britain, even though it may be held that he was the aggressor in a controversy which might well never have been started.

However, even those who regret the present exchange of views between the chairman of our senate committee on foreign relations and the British chancellor of the exchequer, in common fairness must admit that in both Great Britain and France—throughout much of Europe, for that matter—there has been of late persistent vilification of the United States and attempts to belittle this country in the eyes of the world. Almost daily reference by European papers to the United States as "Uncle Shyllock" and to Americans as snarlers and holding out that our refusal to cancel the debts Europe owe us—for that is what Europe seeks—is responsible for the conditions which exist across the Atlantic today, have developed the need that somebody speak, and speak plainly, demanding that, in common decency, those at the head of government affairs over in Europe should tell the truth and let the people they are supposed to serve know the facts as they are.

Senator Borah has done this, and he has done it very forcefully. He has shown that, thus far, we have forgiven and written off over $1,000,000,000 of the debts European governments contracted during and subsequent to the war. He has presented figures to show the charge that we went into the war to protect our loans is unfounded for the reason that almost all the war debts Europe owe us, if not all, were contracted after our entrance into the war. He has shown that both Great Britain and France fully understood that they were securing loans and not gifts, and quotes their own officials to support his showing. He quotes the highest officials at Great Britain in praise of the disinterestedness of the United States in entering the war and finally asks: "What has occurred to work this change from praise and tribute to vilification?"

In this connection, it may be recalled that Secretary Mellon has presented figures to show that, by the agreement reached, but not ratified, the French government is to repay only the amount of money loaned her since the end of the war, and yet France, where industry is thriving and whose people—not only her moneyed classes, but her business and agricultural, as well—are prosperous, even though their country may be bankrupt, would have her debt wiped off the slate.

But there is one point which Great Britain and France are careful to overlook in their discussions of the debts they owe us, and that is that, while they suffered greatly, pitifully, in life and blood as a result of the war, they came out of it territorially enriched beyond their wildest dreams, while the United States came out utterly without spoils.

Great Britain has suggested that all the war debts be cancelled, which is a very shrewd suggestion from the British point of view and would result, if executed, to great, if not so great, benefit in France. Britain suggests the cancellation of all war debts due from one of the contestants to another, but at no time has the British government ever so much as hinted at its willingness to restore the territory of which the United States were despoiled. When the spoils of victory were apportioned and set out at the Versailles conference, Great Britain received 3,500,000 square miles of territory and France, 402,382, which means 2,692,720,380 acres to the two.

It is a precept of the law that one must come into court with clean hands. Neither Great Britain nor France has come into the court of world opinion with clean hands. The hands of both—Great Britain in a greater degree and France in a lesser—are besmeared with the spoils they wrested from Germany. Before either chides the United States for asking something like thirty-five per cent of what they owe her, let them restore to the vanquished the thirty-five per cent of territory which was forced upon the vanquished and which, from the day it was signed, has been a greater menace to world peace than ever existed in all the annals of history. Let them give back the spoils, and then, and then only, will they be in position to talk of the cancellation of war debts.

Another thing we can't understand is why any American should spend twenty-eight days chasing around the earth when in less than a tenth of the time he could come from any part of the country out here to the very heart of the garden spot of the world.

The Journal and Review, of Aiken, South Carolina, commenting on the fact that the Rotary Day club of that place was organized thirty years ago to agitate for shorter skirts, remarks that "few movements have met with more marked success." Yet it's just possible that even the good women of Aiken never contemplated a style of dress which would spell preparedness for floods.

What can that scientist possibly have against Tennessee to go to the trouble of pointing out that the blood of the chimpanzee resembles that of human beings more closely than it does the blood of any specimen of animal life?

A day or two ago a Russian communist was arrested over in Paris for mutilating with a sledge hammer the piece of bronze statuette of the Place des Etats Unis representing an American volunteer and a French poilu. He said he did it because Sacco and Vanzetti had been sentenced over here for murder innocent as to which figure represented the American, he had smashed both. The unusually long time Sacco and Vanzetti have under sentence of death has permitted many demonstrations of resentment and led to numerous threats upon the lives of American diplomats and officials, among others being Mr. Herrick, our ambassador to France.

NO MORE MARRIAGES AT SEA BY CAPTAINS OF UNITED STATES BOATS.

Making for Healthy Growth.

BY ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.

United States Senator from New York.

Former Commissioner of Health, New York City.

A dispatch from Georgia tells a wonderful tale about the size of men in that noble state. Instead of being slim and thin individuals these appear to be an unusual number of big men.

In the Savannah High school a "Six-Foot" club has been organized. It numbers fifteen members between sixteen and eighteen years of age.

In the Technical High school in Atlanta are said to be more than a hundred students, each six feet or more in height. Many of them weigh in excess of 200 pounds. These boys are between sixteen and seventeen years of age.

It would be interesting to have some accurate figures from other sections of the country. New England, New York and New Jersey, the midwest states, the northwest and southwest states should give us figures for comparison.

If Georgia boys are actually larger on the average, we must seek the cause. Natural origin, mineral content of the water, peculiar feeding and greater exposure to sunshine—these are the factors which we are to mind unfold as among the possible reasons for producing unusual growth.

Trees like those found in California, the giant redwoods, could not grow to such heights in northern Canada. Vegetation in the southern states is never stunted for size in northern sections.

It is not merely about the growth of the body, but of the mind, in which we have much to do with the great development of vegetation in some sections of the north. Shaded and covered on the plant cells, the sunlight makes them multiply at a great rate.

If the water and soil of Georgia carry the "growing material" it may well be that the abundant sunlight makes them available. This makes possible their transmutation into cells and fiber, causing rapid growth of bones and body.

I doubt if sunlight alone would do the work. It is that the water factor, the nature of many things should be the big factor of life. The fresh fruits and vegetables could seem to be taken in quantities over there, too. But in July milk is not the common and abundant food it is in America. So the child does not get the lime and other growing elements of this important food.

I have not seen a comparison of Italian and Georgia waters. Here may be an important difference. Georgia has her famous springs. The "Blue" springs of Alabama are particularly and justly famous. From earliest times their waters have been eagerly for their healing and health-giving properties.

Good health and growth depend, you see, on several factors. Every child should receive their benefits.

ANSWERS TO HEALTH QUERIES

H. M. G. Q.—What do you advise for blood which is too thick? I have had an operation and have high blood pressure.

A.—Blood and general care will bring down high blood pressure. Too much meat, eggs and excessive salt should be avoided. For further particulars send a self-addressed, stamped envelope and repeat your question.

D. S. Q.—I have very bad varicose veins, which are extending into the feet. Would it be wise to have them operated upon? Is it dangerous?

A.—Would varicose veins be harmful during expectant motherhood?

A.—If they are very painful and of long standing, surgery may be advisable. See your doctor for his advice. This is not considered a dangerous operation.

This condition would naturally be more painful during this particular time, due to increased strain and tension through the veins.

M. C. Q.—What causes the biting of finger nails, and how can the habit be stopped?

A.—Either due to nervousness or habit. Pacifying the fingernails with liniment of aloe vera is usually helpful in correcting the trouble.

E. M. Q.—My thighs are very thin. What would you advise to develop them?

A.—Exercise, such as walking, dancing, running, climbing, etc., should all help to develop your legs.—Copyright, 1929.

Dr. Copeland will answer for readers of this paper questions on medicinal, hygienic and sanitation matters that are of general interest. Where the subject of a letter is such that it can be published in this column, Dr. Copeland will, where the question is a proper one, write you personally if a self-addressed, stamped envelope is enclosed. Address all inquiries to Dr. Royal S. Copeland, in care of his office.

THE GIRL THEY LOVE WALKED IN THROUGH THE DOOR.

As dead as a valley in autumn.

And neither turned his head her way.

Nor asked of her who she had sought him.

But they stood at the end, and neither said, "She is standing before us that is dead!"

"Though a moment before us whispered, 'My friend!'"

And his friend, "My more than brother,

We alone shall see that face to the end

With the smile that she gave no other."

Neither cried out, "Behold my dear

She stands and her hands are above my hair!"

"Though one had said: 'There is none but you,

Since heaven has chosen and blessed us,

And we alone in the skeleton hands

Could hold the hands that crossed us."

Neither said, "Welcome!" neither sought

To take the hand she stretched out.

They did not doubt that she was there

Like a perished sky in the autumn.

So still they were, so cold their hearts—

Each waited as if turned to stone.

To tell her hands, to taste alone

The triumph of his flesh and bone.

Colonel Lawrence, Air Mechanic.

[Washington Post.]

It has rarely happened in this old world that man who have achieved fame, in wars, in literature, or the sciences, have elected to descend from their pinnacles and hide themselves from their fellow-men. Ordinary mortals, however, are usually content to remain in the glare and display their decorations.

During the World War the name of Lieutenant Colonel Lawrence was frequently found in the dispatches, especially those from Asia

Minor, because of the great aid he was able to render British officers in the campaign against the Turkish allies of the Kaiser. He had lived for years on and near the shores of the Mediterranean and the Red Sea and had the confidence of the Bedouin tribes to the last degree. He is credited with having aided

General Allenby, commander of the British army, in the anti-Turkish campaign, to a greater extent than any other man. But throughout his military career he preferred to play the game alone and in his own way, and was permitted to have that way. Called absolutely the "Greatest King of Arabia," he refused decorations and even far away in his aeroplane from a ceremonial presentation for which he had been summoned.

Little has been heard of Colonel Lawrence during the years since the armistice, but it has been discovered that under an assumed name he is serving in the British royal air force as an enlisted mechanic. The only explanation vouchsafed for this strange man is that he finds outdoor military life and hard work with long hours beneficial to his health. Lawrence seems to prefer a monkey wrench to a scepter.

Q. How can I estimate the weight of hay in a square stack? H. J. H.

A. The weight in the settled hay stack depends upon the number of days it has stood. For a stack standing less than thirty days, 500 cubic feet per ton is the standard of weight. For a stack standing between thirty and sixty days, 550 cubic feet per ton is the standard and for hay standing over seventy-five days, the weight is 615 cubic feet per ton.

Q. How many acres are there in Arlington? R. E. McK.

A. There are 408 1/3 acres in Arlington cemetery.

Q. When is the Japanese doll festival? A. P. S.

A. It comes each year on the third day of the third month, March. Each family brings out the dolls of all ancestors. Often a doll is added to the collection upon this occasion.

Q. Am I an American citizen? I was born in Europe and lived there until I was twenty-one. Both my parents became naturalized American citizens before I became of age. F. B. D.

A. The naturalization bureau says that in order for the son of an alien to derive citizenship from his father's naturalization he must take up his permanent residence in the United States before attaining the age of twenty-one years. You are, therefore, not an American citizen since you did not come to this country before you reached the age of majority.

Q. What is the average age of a gas well, when the wells are drilled about 500 feet apart? How far can a well draw from another, the rock pressure being about 1,250 pounds? H. H.

A. The average life of a gas well is about five years. The common practice is to place one gas well to each ten acres, and with as high a

The Way of the World.

BY GROVE PATTERSON.

Mussolini, dictator of Italy, is the world's outstanding example of the capacity for keeping order by the "hard-boiled" method. For example, says Mussolini, "a labor strike is no more excusable than insurrection. Labor and capital have equal rights and duties and their offenses are punished. Labor organizations, to fact all organizations of a public character affecting the interests of the nation, can exist only in so far as they are interested directly or indirectly into the issue of the state. The absurdity of permitting the constant threat of economic civil war is ruled out."

So Mussolini goes about ruling out this, that and the other thing in the social, economic, industrial lives of Italy. He thinks he is fixing things forever. As a matter of fact he is doing things to last, perhaps, as long as he lives and keeps his grip. You can not stop strikes by force. You can not force harmony with a club. You can not make justice with an eye. Peace in effect must come from peace in cause. Make the conditions under which men work right and the reason for industrial war will have been taken away.

A wise woman has said that the lack of money is a distinct asset toward the successful furnishing of a small house. Did you ever think of things that way? Almost anybody can do a great deal if he has a great deal to do with. The woman who makes a real home with next to nothing is really great. The boy who earns his education by shoveling coal into a furnace and distributing soup in a college boarding-house is nearly always a braver man than the one who picks his checks out of dad's envelope.

St. James Barrie says the sole revenge age can take on youth is to preach to it. And youth quickly catches on to preaching. But if youth can catch something worth catching from association with you—that is worth your mightiest effort.

The great aim of the Boy Scouts should be the aim toward a useful life. It should be two aim of service. Too bad Boy Scouts have to wear uniforms. That smacks of militarism. That is suggestive of war. Boys should be led in to forget war, not to think of it, not to play at it. It should not be put into their minds by any organization.

Girl Scouts are being taught to be more than outdoor girls. They are taught that home duties are big duties. In New York Girl Scouts are giving hours each day to looking after homes while mother gets a little leisure.

Anybody can be spectacular. All you have to do is wear a red coat with lavender stripes. To be useful is something different—and much harder.

The government made it clear this morning that it would not allow physical seizure of the 12,600 churches which are to be abandoned to the Catholic clergy on Saturday. The move at the same time was a Catholic scheme to deliver the churches to lay committees who can be used to lay out the churches.

Demand Seizure

The ministry of the interior has been understood to have informed the various states that they were to instruct the municipal authorities to demand the churches to be turned over to them. The municipal authorities were instructed to take possession of the churches and the church furnishings including paintings, jewels, furniture, etc.

The municipal authorities were requested to be prepared to turn the use of the churches for religious purposes when asked by 10 leading men of the respective communities, whether Roman Catholics, Schismatic Catholics or Protestants.

Nicholas Perez, patriarch of the Mexican Schismatic Catholic Church, formally requested permission and protection from the government for the holding of services on Sunday at the Cathedral of Mexico City and the famous Shrine of the Virgin of Guadalupe outside the city.

OVERRULES MOTION TO SUSPEND INDICTMENTS

Spectators Gamble on Outcome of Coney Island Officials' Trial

Cincinnati, July 20.—Common Pleas Judge John Caldwell today overruled the motion of defense attorneys to quash the gambling indictments against eleven officials and employees of the Coney Island race track.

Pleas of not guilty were entered and trial began immediately.

Julius Caldwell had been expected to reverse his decision regarding the motion to quash until Friday. He opened court with his ruling, however, and the eleven were brought in to trial.

A number of jurors called late yesterday filed into the courtroom four teen women and the remainder men. Only three men were in the tentative twelve called for challenge.

In the corridors outside where the gallery of curiosity seekers and interested spectators overflowed the courtroom odds were running 10 to one that there would be no convictions.

Lady Peel

ON the stage Beatrice Lillie is the delightfully talented star of Chas. H. Revue, which for two years has so successfully invaded America. In private life she is Lady Peel, wife of Sir Robert Peel, descendant of the great English statesman of the same name in the first half of the nineteenth century.

This is what Lady Peel says about one of her experiences in America.

"When I came to this country I did not know what the popular drink was. Soon after my arrival I was offered a glass of Clicquot Club Pale Dry Ginger Ale. I liked it immediately. It has such a delicate taste and such a jolly sparkle.
Between the acts and after the theatre I find it particularly welcome. Clicquot Club is indeed one more thing I like about America."

Two flavors to choose from
YOU can now get Clicquot Club Ginger Ale in two flavors. The new Pale Dry Clicquot is very delicate and subtle in taste. The Golden Clicquot is more gingery, a particularly invigorating drink—for a generation the most popular of all bottled beverages, the nation over. Clicquot Club Ginger Ale, noted for its high quality also gives more generous quantity and at a very reasonable price. The Clicquot Club Company,

Labor Federation at Odds With Unofficial Leaders of Proposed Barnstorming

Differences Bid Fair To Embroil Two Most Powerful Labor Organizations in America In Bombastic War of Charges and Counter Charges

Cleveland, O., July 29.—The ambition of Albert E. Cagle, editor of the Health School of Locomotive Engineers, to lead an unofficial American labor delegation on a barnstorming tour of Europe to end the death of a rate information concerning labor or conditions there, has drawn the ire of the American Federation of Labor. It has also embroiled the two most powerful labor organizations of America in a bombastic war of charges and counter charges.

The first bunch of letters was sent last month by Cagle personally conducting the tour. The A. F. of L. announced that the editor's proposed invasion of Europe would be harmful to the American labor movement.

Will Go To Study
Cagle came to the front with a statement that his delegation was out of fidelity and was organized for the accumulation of information for the benefit of the Health School and other organizations who may require data. His itinerary calls for studies in Italy where Mussolini is experimenting in new economic regulations and in Soviet Russia.

On the proposed delegation expected to make the great tour, the (inter-

Beatrice Lillie Lady Peel

ON the stage Beatrice Lillie is the delightfully talented star of Charles Revue, which for two years has so successfully invaded America. In private life she is Lady Peel, wife of Sir Robert Peel, descendant of the great English statesman of the same name in the first half of the nineteenth century.

This is what Lady Peel says about one of her experiences in America.

"When I came to this country I did not know what the popular drink was. Soon after my arrival I was offered a glass of Chicquot Club Pale Dry Ginger Ale. I liked it immediately. It has such a delicate taste and such a jolly sparkle. Between the acts and after the theatre I find it particularly welcome. Chicquot Club is indeed one more thing I like about America."

Two flavors to choose from

YOU can now get Chicquot Club Ginger Ale in two flavors. The new Pale Dry Chicquot is very delicate and subtle in taste. The Golden Chicquot is more gingery, a particularly invigorating drink—for a generation the most popular of all bottled beverages, the nation over. Chicquot Club Ginger Ale, noted for its high quality, also gives more generous quantity and at a very reasonable price. The Chicquot Club Company, Millis, Massachusetts.

Quicksands of Love

BY ADOLF GARRISON

MADGE'S NOTE

Dick looked away so quickly after he had said that right telephone to me that I had a suspicion to an sure I was not I had wished to do. I was not I had wished to do. I was not I had wished to do.

I was not I had wished to do. I was not I had wished to do. I was not I had wished to do. I was not I had wished to do. I was not I had wished to do.

Her eyes were purely perfunctory. For always she kept a drawing board in our home and even her work upon it whenever she wished.

What do you—? I began but got no further.

Where floating around in my mind, I thought enough to be called a thing. I was not going to tell you a thing now. Then when the button is pressed I can prove myself and say I know it all the time and you never move will be able to tell whether I am Sappho or not or whether I am a little about that note to Philip Vrell.

I am as used to Lillian's pet talk, a mixture of disliking question that I felt no trace of resentment and acceptance of her sulking of conversational topics with fairly good grace.

It all tried and ready I said. I did it last night. Shall I read it to you?

As I have already read it, Kathleen interrupted, will you please excuse Lillian and me. We want to get our nursery and sitting room settled before we go out and Kille can help us now better than any other time. As well as you draw these down and move our traps up the rear staircase.

I'm going to carry all my own things," Lillian announced proudly as she glanced at Kathleen. A few seconds later Kathleen pulled shut the sliding door separating the two large rooms and Lillian and I left the breakfast table and entered the kitchen in chairs drawn to the windows from which we could see the Hudson below.

"Let's hear the 'Palal Letter,'" "Now let's hear the 'Palal Letter,'" she laughed and I opened the note which I had taken from my desk. "I'll let you take for granted that I know how to put on a proper style and salutation. I refused and began to read."

I learned definitely today that the proper care of my child without my supervision can be taken over by a personal friend who is a trained nurse. Therefore I am at liberty to accept your offer of a position in your organ trail. Please advise me when you wish me to begin work. Yours, very truly, Margaret Spencer Graham."

Lillian threw back her head and laughed heartily.

I'd like to be looking over his shoulder when he reads it," she commented.

"Why?" I asked hesitantly. "For I had spent much time in stilling the note of my word which would make it other than a cheerful perfunctory acceptance and I thought I could criticism in Lillian's tone."

Because this is going to tell him altogether too well, she related. He always complains that women cannot be business like that they are too much handicapped by temperament when there is no one in the world as temperamental as he. But if I do not mistake my old friend he is going to be a little disappointed in the tone of this for I do not think he would object to a touch of the temperamental in you."

Mansfield and Cleaners Play Scoreless Tie Game

One Hit Each Allowed by Rice and Shultz in Battle; Visitor Whiffs 19 Batters

Record Contest Played at Central Junior High Diamond. Darkness Intervenes After 10 Innings, Out of Town Hurler Thrills Large Crowd

WHAT is believed to be the greatest recreation baseball game on record was played between the Mansfield All Stars and the Anthony Cleaners at the Central Junior High diamond last night before a crowd of several hundred spectators.

For ten complete innings the two teams battled to decide the winner but without success. Darkness intervened after the tenth inning and the contest ended with a scoreless tie.

For ten innings the contest was what is believed to be the greatest balling duel in the history of recreation baseball. The two teams were evenly matched, and the game was a real thriller. The contest was played at the Central Junior High diamond, and the crowd was estimated to be the largest ever seen at the place.

Pitchers' Game
It was a real pitchers' game. Which of the two was the greater pitcher would be hard to say. Rice allowed only one run in the first inning and struck out 14 batters for the Marion hurler had the best of support. Shultz pitched for the Anthony Cleaners and was equally effective.

Shultz gave his team little chance to score in the first inning. He relied upon himself to win. The Marion hurler accounted for 21 of the visiting team's 20 put outs striking out 14 men, including two punks and having one assist to first.

Shultz had one of the fastest deliveries ever seen in the city. It had the Cleaners baffled throughout the game. In the first inning, Shultz whiffed three men and in the second struck out two more. Not an inning went by unless Shultz had struck out one or two men. In the fourth frame the Cleaners again went out in order on three strikes.

Shultz Beat Stars
Last night marked the second appearance of Shultz in Marion. Several weeks ago, Shultz pitched for the Mansfield team against the Marion Stars in an inter-city game at the Central Junior High diamond and won by the score of 1 to 2. In this game which went nine innings before the winner was decided, Shultz struck out 14 men and allowed but one hit. Weimer who

Records of Vanishing Race Being Destroyed by Neglect, Fires and Decay

By FRANK J. HANSEN
Washington July 28—The totem poles of southeastern Alaska, among the most remarkable records of a vanishing race, are rapidly disappearing through neglect, decay and even outright destruction. At these poles, which might be preserved as a record of the same way because the native Indians will not allow anything to be done with these sacred relics.

Efforts by the Smithsonian Institution of Washington to preserve at least one typical group of these poles and one typical Indian house in its natural state have so far been thwarted by a combination of natural and man-made factors. The village, originally selected for this plan of preservation, no longer is in shape for such treatment.

Proposed Monument
The village in question is at Kanai, which was abandoned about 1900. It stands on a place of water, land and today is overgrown with weeds and shrubs. Its house, tottem and the fine collection of totem poles, partly burned and partly in a state of decay, beyond hope of saving. Also it is now entirely off the route of steamship and with the site has been designated as a National Monument and is therefor under the jurisdiction of the United States Department of Agriculture. The Smithsonian scientists who have visited it this year do not believe much good would be done in preserving the historical and ethnological records since the public will have no access to it.

The Smithsonian and other great museums have a number of excellent specimens of totem poles. But most of these have come from the Haida tribes of Queen Charlotte Island, British Columbia. The Ullgi and Japwian tribes of Alaska are the other principal totem-pole-making groups, and few of their totem poles have been saved or are likely to be.

These Indians are great hunters. Their villages have been repeatedly abandoned as they have roved in search of better fishing grounds or to avoid the attacks of enemies. Since no totem poles have been carved for more than half a century, and the wood does not last well unless kept painted or otherwise protected, the famous poles are usually practically ruined by rot by the time a village is abandoned or soon thereafter.

Totems Held Sacred
Where the Indians still occupy villages dating back to the totem pole era, they object strenuously to the white man's ideas of moving their sacred monuments. The totem poles may differ in form and are carved with the emblems of the tribes and the symbols of great events in the lives of chiefs. They are either tribal monuments or individual grave markers. In either event they are sacred and the white man's desire for them is regarded by the Indians as an insult to their proud heritage.

Most of these Indians of southeastern Alaska are very poor and large cash offers for totem poles have been tempting them. Even when they desire to sell, however, they are not likely to strike a bargain because the laws of inheritance among these tribes have been entirely upset in recent generations and the totem, instead of being the individual property of a single heir, has become very rapidly the property of practically a whole village. Hence any cash offer must be large enough to satisfy everybody, and such negotiations have been attempted have usually come to an end by the time an increasing list of owners have piled up demands running into thousands of dollars.

Community Ownership
The Indians have made this community ownership stand a court test and some twenty years ago when a group of tourists from Seattle sailed ashore one night and stole a great white totem pole which was taken home and erected in Pioneer Square in their home city. The Indians, who had a loud protest and finally collected a big bill of damages, which was paid through the Chamber of Commerce of Seattle. This episode dampened the enthusiasm of private collectors.

It seems that a few years ago the inheritance laws of these tribes worked through the female line from a chief to his sister's eldest son. It is believed this scheme was originally devised to remove the temptation for sons to murder their fathers or for some other purpose of avoiding intra-tribal strife. Whatever the purpose, about the time of the first white settlement the law began to break down in favor of a complete distribution of property among all direct and collateral heirs, and the Indians, having already in mind the poll-tax system of holding great feasts and giving their wealth during their lifetime, have ceased to leave any great amount of goods to anybody. Thus the totem poles have become practically community property.

He addressed the club on "How To Cultivate the Memory." He declared that mistakes of forgetfulness could be avoided. He said the way to remember an incident was to make a mental picture of it.
